Background

The health and socio-economic impact of COVID-19 have been severe and prolonged, particularly on vulnerable groups that are hardest hit by the pandemic especially in health, educational and economic systems. Civil Society Organizations (CSOs) play a critical role in engaging citizens as a foundation for sustainable innovation to contain and mitigate the effects of the pandemic. They contribute to the immediate and medium-term efforts of the member countries (MCs) to prevent, contain and respond to negative impacts of COVID-19.

Objectives

- Highlight the challenges and opportunities of the role of the CSOs in responding to the impact of COVID-19 in IsDB MCs
- Share success stories on innovative and transformative projects implemented by CSOs in addressing COVID-19 effects
- Explore potential partners for resource mobilization and building global alliance for the TADAMON Program
- Provide a platform for the stakeholders to scale up their interventions to address the development needs of the vulnerable groups in MCs
